

Oliver's House launches Schoolwise

Oliver's House, in Benoni, is in the process of launching its latest project, titled Schoolwise.

It is aimed at creating an online definitive registry on all schools in South Africa.

The most important aspect of Schoolwise is that it offers every school in the country its own free website.

"Free" means absolutely no cost to the school -- no developmental costs, no hosting fees and no monthly subscriptions.

The website is quite powerful, in that schools have full control over the content of their website and are able to load photographs and create links to other websites.

It also provides advertising capabilities, which can be used as an extra source of income for the school.

If the Schoolwise project is to be a success, then as many schools as possible in the country must take a website.

That is why Oliver's House is offering these websites to schools free of charge.

Oliver's House carries all developmental costs and hosting fees.

The schools' free website is already published on the internet, but there is no content.

Schools just have to contact Oliver's House for their registration details and they can load content into their sites.

For more information regarding this project, schools can view the Schoolwise website at www.schoolwise.co.za, or contact David Sellar on 748-6500.
